For the Class of 2019:

As we approach the residency application season, the AAMC Careers in Medicine® Residency and Fellowship Program Search now includes an expanded level of program detail within the profiles of thousands of residency programs. In most cases, each residency program's profile page now includes a description of the program, characteristics of residents currently enrolled in the program, as well as current data on graduate career plans—what trainees in that program do upon completion of their residency.

Students are encouraged to use their research on specialties and programs as a starting point for conversations with specialty advisors about career goals, the characteristics they most value in a potential residency program, and in developing a smart application strategy.
