Subject: Resource for M3s and M4s

Hello,

A medical student mentioned that the "WeeklyWire" service would be a great place to post this new resource for M3s and M4s. My brother (currently a PGY-1 gen surg resident at Baylor) and I just created what will hopefully become an essential resource for M3s and M4s preparing for the Match. Its called Ratearesidency.com. During my brothers Match process, he constantly complained about that lack of insight he received on the residency programs he was applying to. He always said that the most helpful insight he received was from fellow medical students that rotated at that program during their M3/M4 years.

Thus Ratearesidency.com was born! Our website allows medical students to read reviews/communicate with one another about their experiences at different residency programs. Best part is, it is completely free. Anyone who wants to join just has to leave a review. We truly believe that this well help medical students all over the country better prepare for one of the most important decisions they will ever have to make.

We were hoping you would be willing to send this out on the Weekly Wire. If this is something you can help us with, that would be greatly appreciated. Also, I would be more than glad to answer any questions you may have. Here is a link to our about us page so you can check it out - <https://ratearesidency.com/about-our-website/>. We just launched two weeks ago and are receiving reviews from all over the country.

Thanks,
Yoni Haim
