

Internships with Vermont Physicians for a National Health Program

The Vermont chapter of Physicians for a National Health Program (pnhp.org) is offering two, five-week summer internships for current first-year medical students. The internships include an educational component, outreach, and an independent project of the intern's choosing.

The interns will spend time with several Vermont clinicians, with the Green Mountain Care Board, and at other sites. The interns will read about and discuss alternate health care systems including single payer, as well as develop an understanding of the mixture of public and private financing and delivery that we now have in the US. The student will help to tailor his/her individual program, and will have a set of learning objectives.

Interns will receive a stipend of $1250 for the 5-week period.

Students will need their own transportation, computer, and cell phone. Housing may be available to reduce travel time for students studying different parts of the state. Medical students from any medical school and any state are eligible to apply.

For a job description and instructions for applying, go to http://www.pnhp.org/vermont/medical\_student\_internship

Physicians for a National Health Program is a non-profit research and education organization of 20,000 physicians, medical students and health professionals who support a universal, comprehensive single-payer national health program.

For more information, contact Marvin Malek MD, mmalek66@gmail.com or Sarah Kemble, MD, skemblemd@aol.com .

Applications will be accepted and interviews offered on a rolling basis.